UNTIL a few yean ago famurs considered concrete a rather mysterious material, that could be used successfully only by experts. They knew that upon the quality of the cement depended much of the success of concrete work. They had so means of testing cement, such as big contractors employ, and so could not be sure of its quality.

He was kept from using this best and most economical of materials by 1. Lack of nowledge of how to mix and place concrete.

2. Lack of a brand of cement upon the quality of which he could absolutely rely.

has upplied both these requirements. We employed men to make a thorough investigation of the farmer's requirements; to find out where and how he could use concrete with profit to himself; to discover all problems he might come across and to solve them. This investigation was expensive. But when it was completed we had the material for our campaign to show the farmer how and where to use concrete, and we printed a book, "What the Farmer Can do With Concrete," for free distribution. That book makes every farmer who reads it at concrete expert, as far aft in needs are concerned. He finds that there is nothing mysterious about concrete—that a few single rules supply all the knowledge required. At the same time we met the farmer's second objection—inability to state the quality of connest—by producing rement of a quality that does not need to be tested.
